The New York Commercial Advertiser, Republican, is not much enthused over Postmaster General Gary's postal savings banks scheme, and remarks in commenting upon the suggestion that the money deposited could be used in the construction of public buildings: "The postal bank ing scheme is worth a good deal of sober reflection before it is finally adopted."

The versatility of some Ohio men is remarkable. THE POLICE COURT.

A Colored Deputy Sheriff Locked Up by Order of Chief of Police Melton for Failing to Obey an Order of the Court.

Mayor Wright last April, about a month after his election, issued an order to the effect that during the session of the Police Court no person, except officers of the court, witnesses and newspaper men should be allowed inside the railing dividing the court room. Yesterday at noon, while court was in session, Deputy Sheriff Wm. Galon, colored, came into the court room and took a seat within the rail. Policeman Knox ordered him out, but he refused to move, whereupon Chief of Police Jno. R. Melton ordered him locked up, and policeman Knox arrested him and locked him up in the guard house. About twenty minutes afterwards ex-Mayor Jno. J. Fowler went to the City Hall and stood Deputy Galon's bond. At 1 o'clock Galon was arraigned in Justice Bunting's court, charged with failing to obey an officer while the officer was acting in the discharge of his duty. After hearing the evidence in the case and argument by the defendant's counsel, Herbert McClammy, Esq., Justice Bunting dismissed the case, holding that the defendant, if guilty of any violation of the law, was guilty of contempt of court, but was not guilty of the violation charged against him.

The arrest and the trial of Deputy Galon caused much excitement in court circles, especially as Deputy Galon states that he is thinking about bringing criminal action against Chief Melton or suing Chief Melton's bondsmen. Deputy Galon states that he went up to the City Hall to serve a warrant on a defendant in the Police Court, and that when Policeman Knox ordered him out he explained his errand, and then Chief Melton ordered him locked up.

Policeman Knox says he ordered Galon out, and that he (Galon) abruptly refused to go several times, and it was then, acting under orders from Chief Melton, that he arrested Galon.

Truckman With a Bale of Cotton Knocked Into the River.

Yesterday morning on the wharf at the Champion Compress two trucks, one loaded with a bale of cotton, being rapidly propelled by the stalwart arms of two negro men, collided, and one of the men, Ted Bowen, and the truck with its load of cotton were knocked into the river. Several of the colored hands pulled Bowen out of the water, and afterwards succeeded in getting the bale of cotton, but the truck sank to the bottom of the river. It seems that Bowen had just emerged from the warehouse, trucking the cotton, when the other truck started to enter the warehouse, and, of course, a collision could not be averted.

A COUNTRYMAN SWINDLED.

Cheated Out of Five Dollars by Two Negro Sharpers.

Now that Christmas is near at hand and the bustle in business circles is consequently greater, the sharpers in the city have commenced to ply their unlawful trade in an energetic manner.

Thursday morning several white countrymen arrived in the city from Duplin county, and in the afternoon, after they had disposed of nearly all their produce—from the sale of which a neat little sum of money had been realized—they stopped at the cart house on Sixth street between Harnett and Swann, and one of the countrymen offered for sale a dressed hog to a crowd of bystanders. A negro man who was in the crowd, asked to be shown the hog, which was done. The hog was weighed and thoroughly inspected, but the countryman and the negro could not agree on the price. About this time another negro man put in an appearance and pulling a watch-charm, a diminutive locket, from his pocket, offered it to the other negro to give to the countryman as part payment for the hog. This, however, the pretended purchaser said he would not do, because, he did not believe the charm was in good condition and that the lock could be opened. This statement the new arrival refuted, and turning to the countryman he requested the loan of five dollars to bet the other man that he could open the lock, remarking aside to the countryman that he would win the money "dead easy" and that they would divide the winnings. The countryman handed out the five dollars, and as he did so the intended purchaser called his attention to the hog, and the negro man in possession of the five dollars quietly slipped out of the cart house unobserved. When it was discovered that the negro man and the money had disappeared the intended purchaser became highly indignant and went to look for him. It was the last seen of either negro man or money.

HYPNOTISM.

The Entertainments to be Given at the Opera House Beginning Next Monday Night.

Hypnotism is an unknown science to most of us, yet to-day it is taught in many of the leading colleges in this country under the head of physiology, among them being Harvard, Yale, Princeton, and the Johns Hopkins University of Baltimore.

Monday night the people of Wilmington are to have their first opportunity of seeing the much heralded "Lees," who are, according to the press notices, among the foremost practitioners of this wonderful science in this country. The public entertainments given by these people, however, are not melancholy spectacles, but performances which abound with humor and instruction of great value. The Lees never humiliate their subjects or hold them up to the ridicule of the public.

During their Monday evening's entertainment, they will repeat the experiment which has caused widespread interest, the putting to sleep of a subject for two days and nights without food or water.

Seats now on sale at Gerken's.

"LONDON ASSURANCE"

One of the society events of the season will be the appearance at the Opera House on the evening of the 31st inst. of the Dramatic Club of the University of North Carolina, presenting Dion L. Boucicault's ever-popular and successful play "London Assurance." The Dramatic Club of the University has been in existence for a number of years and their presentations have always been of a superior order, and the piece to be presented here is their greatest success. The caste is composed of the following gentlemen, each of whom, it is said, portrays the role assigned him, whether it be a male or a female impersonation, with great skill, and are, viz: Messrs. May, Pond, Busbee, Rawls, Harris Myers, Groves, Follin, Staten and Cox.

A large audience will, no doubt, be present at the performance.

MARRIAGE AT HARRELL'S STORE.

Rev. R. H Gilbert Leads to the Altar the Charming Daughter of Mr. Thomas C. Fennell.

[Star Correspondence.]

HARRELL'S STORE, N. C., Dec. 17.

Harrell's Store was the scene of a beautiful wedding last Wednesday evening at 7.30 o'clock, when Rev. R. H. Gilbert led to the altar Miss Lula B. Fennell, the charming daughter of Mr. Thos. C. Fennell. The church was tastefully decorated, and there were throngs of people to witness the ceremony.

The wedding march was rendered by Miss Herring. The groomsmen were Messrs. Bruce Boykin, of Clinton; E. J. Hollingsworth, of Hamlet; W. Shaw, of Kerr; James McPhail, of Red Springs; Stephen Caldwell, of Wallace; Raymond Corbett, of Alpine, and Edward Allen, of Harrell's Store. The bridesmaids were Miss Mary Moore, of Alpine; Misses Willie Draughan and Josie Carroll, of Clinton; Miss Kate McPhail, of Red Springs, and Misses Bertha Caldwell and Laura Swinson, of Harrell's Store. Following these came the bride leaning upon the arm of her maid of honor. Miss Berta Bell, of Newbern. The groom, accompanied by his best man, Mr. Ivey Taylor, of Wilmington, entered by a side aisle and joined the bride in front of the altar. The ceremony was impressively performed by Rev. Jas W. Kramer, of Wilmington. Afterwards the bridal party repaired to the residence of Mr. Fennell, where a delightful reception was held.

The acquaintances of the young couple wish them all happiness.

IS A DOG PROPERTY?

Interesting Case at Durham—Mr. Brook Empie a Party to the Suit.

The Durham Herald gives the following particulars of a suit for the ownership of a bird dog in which Mr. B. G. Empie, of Wilmington, was plaintiff:

At Durham yesterday there was a suit for the ownership of a bird dog. Mr. B. G. Empie, a University law student, gave Mr. Oakey, of Durham, possession of the dog; the plaintiff regarding it as a temporary loan, while the defendant considered it an absolute gift, with the condition that Empie could borrow him for hunting purposes. Empie tried to get the dog.

Oakey demurred to the complaint on the ground that a dog was not property and moved to dismiss the action, but this was over ruled. He then set up the claim that the dog was his rightful property and filed a counter claim for the training, care and board of the dog in the event the court should adjudge Empie entitled to its possession.

The court found Empie was entitled to the dog, but that Oakey was entitled to $60 for care and board, to be off-set by the amount of the earnings of the dog during two hunting seasons, which was ascertained to be $50. Oakey appealed to the Superior Court, and gave bond for the possession of the dog while the appeal is pending. The Herald says that this is the first chapter in what is likely to prove North Carolina's most famous dog case.

CAPE FEAR AND YADKIN.

Another Case Before Judge Simonton at Charleston—Decision Reserved.

[News and Courier 17th]

In the United States Circuit Court yesterday morning, in the suit of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, of New York, against the Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley Railroad Company, an application was made before Judge Simonton for the issuance of one hundred and seventy-six thousand dollars of receiver's certificates for the purpose of paying off certain prior claims and of purchasing large amounts of rolling stock belonging to the North State Equipment Company, and now being used by the receiver of the Cape Fear Road. A number of lawyers from different points were present, and the matter was presented with more or less elaborate argument. The parties to the cause were represented by Judge E. J. D. Cross, of Baltimore, for the Baltimore bondholders' committee; Mr. William A. Lash, president of the Cape Fear road, was represented by Mr. George Rountree. Mr. T. A. Junkin, of New York, opposed the application on behalf of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, trustee, under a three-million-dollar mortgage on the property, and Messrs. R R Rogers, R O Burton and Judge Hudson represented other parties in the cause. Judge Simonton took the papers and reserved decision in the matter.

SATURDAY MORNING, DEC. 18, 1897

FIGHTING AGAINST THE INEVITABLE.

We have several times commented upon the complaint of depression in the cotton manufacturing industry of the Eastern States and given our views upon that subject, with extracts from Northern papers. The Washington Post is neither a Northern nor a Southern paper, but is one which takes a pretty broad view of every question it discusses, and generally a sensible view because broad. In discussing this subject, which is now attracting a good deal of attention North and South, but especially in the North, which sees a great industry slipping away and changing its base, it says:

"The Providence Journal and other New England newspapers, usually well-informed as to conditions and prospects of the manufacturing industries of that section, are inclined to take stock in the report 'that the 10 per cent. wage reduction in the Fall River cotton mills is proposed rather in the hope of a strike than in the expectation that it will be peaceably accepted by the employes.' It is a repetition of the old story of over-production. The Journal says that the cotton cloth market is again deep under a great weight of unsold goods, and this weight is being added to steadily. Early in the year there was a general agreement of the leading New England mills to reduce the very large and increasing stocks on hand by a reduction of working time. This was continued for three months and then full time was resumed. But the stocks of print cloths at Fall River are now reported to be as large as they were before that reduction began. 'Hence,' says the Journal, 'if the employes accept the reduction, well and good; the mills can then undersell competitors and work off their surplus stocks. And if the spinners strike, well and good; for then the mills can take another rest until consumption catches up with them again. It is the employes, in any case, who must chiefly suffer.'

"A good deal of tariff discussion has grown out of this proposed reduction of wages. It has come when nearly all of our industries are prosperous, and when voluntary increases of wages are reported in various quarters. It has come on the eve of the holiday season, and there is something of grim satire in such a Christmas gift to many thousands of wage-workers. Under the Wilson Gorman tariff the cotton factories of New England did not enjoy great or uninterrupted prosperity, and the Republican organs did not fail to lay the blame at the door of the Democratic party in general, and the Democratic Fifty-third Congress in particular. The Post showed the shallowness of that pretence by pointing to the fact that the cotton schedule in the Wilson-Gorman act was framed by New England cotton manufacturers, offered by a New England Senator, and put in to the bill without a single change. In other words, the cotton mills got all the protection they asked for, and we are sure they got all they needed. Neither the depression in that industry under the Democratic tariff of '94, nor the similar trouble under the Dingley act of '97, is due to the tariff. No act of Congress is responsible for the accumulation of unsold goods in the mills or for the consequent reduction of wages. There are some things which legislation cannot accomplish, and one of them is to make demand keep up with supply under all conditions. Congress could not, if it would, regulate the details of the business interests of the country so as to prevent the accumulation of stocks of manufactured articles. And there is another thing—a very important one in its bearing on the present trouble in New England—that is beyond the reach of legislation. Congress could not possibly devise any plan for putting the New England and the Southern factories on a level as to cost of production. Natural laws give to the Southern cotton factories certain great advantages over those of the Eastern States. The Post has for some years past been giving its readers the wonderful story of the development of this industry in the South, where it naturally belongs, and where the bulk of it must eventually be located."

There is some truth and some error in this. It is an error to say that the Dingley tariff, which gives the New England cotton spinners what was considered ample protection and more than the Wilson tariff gave them, although that gave them all they asked, has nothing to do with the depression. The Dingley tariff has much to do with it, first by stimulating to what is called overproduction, not more than is needed, but more than the people can buy in their present circumstances; and again by handicapping trade with other countries and confining our manufacturers too much to the home market, especially when the manufactories are increasing so rapidly and the Eastern mills are so formidably confronted by Southern competition. The Southern mills are in a better position to stand the strain, because of the advantages they have in cheaper labor, cheaper raw material, etc. The New England mills did better under the Wilson tariff when they had less protection than they have since, and yet there was general complaint of depression throughout the country following the panic of 1893, when the farming industry was prostrated and the farmers were in a condition bordering on bankruptcy, with wheat down to the cost of production if not lower, and corn, oats, etc., almost without market. Even then the New England mills were not in a worse condition than they profess to be now, although cotton was higher then and the cost of producing goods greater to them.

But perhaps realizing the fact that the demands of the home market were limited they exercised more judgment in the output and made more of an effort to find a market in other countries, which they could do better than they are now and did.

This is where the tariff affects them. While it gives them a practical monopoly of the home market, or at least that portion of it where they do not encounter Southern competition, it restricts them in other markets where they are confronted by competition from abroad by manufacturers who are not handicapped by onorous tariffs. They can't expect to build up a successful trade and keep it in countries which are practically barred out of this country by prohibitive tariff laws, unless they can make and put down goods in those markets at prices which other manufacturers can't touch, prices so far below them that the gain by purchasing becomes an inducement that makes the buyer overlook any discrimination that this country may make against the products of his country. But under present conditions the American manufacturers can't do that, and hence they suffer by a loss of foreign trade and by the too limited capacity of their home market.

It has simply come to this. If our manufactories are to prosper, there must be a market for their goods in some other countries than this, for with the increasing number of cotton mills the home market would be shortly overdone, even if the people were in a better condition to buy than they are now. Reducing the output can give only temporary relief, and reducing wages can give only temporary relief too, for these reductions cannot be made permanent without leading to unrest and strikes which would be injurious to both mills and strikers. Something must be done which will enable the people to buy more and much more than they do now, or they must find foreign markets, or stop building mills. There is not much prospect of the first being done while the Republican party is in power; the manufactories find themselves much handicapped by the tariff in trying to do the second, and while there may be no new mills built in the East, they will continue to be built in the South where they can live, even if the New England mills perish. A broad, world wide policy is the only one that can save the New England mills, by opening to them avenues where they may survive Southern competition for some time yet. By opening the world's trade to both North and South the field will be roomier for both, and the New England mills will have a better show for continued existence, although they must eventually succumb to the inevitable.

MINOR MENTION.

The fame of our distinguished Governor is not confined to North Carolina nor to the United States, but has spread across the Atlantic as the representative par excellence, unveneered, unvarnished, undiluted and unadulterer of American official morality—on the take line. The London Globe insists that when he gave his they all do it reason for accepting those railroad passes, which the railroads are prohibited by law from giving, and toting a pocket full of them, he exposed the true inwardness of the aforesaid morality, and effectually removed the wool from the eyes of the Britishers, who in their unsophisticated innocence looked upon this country as a worthy exemplar of high-toned morality. The New Orleans Picayune (which doesn't seem to regard this as an altogether picayune business), comes to the rescue of our morality thus:

"With its usual skill in seeing 'Americanism' in any reprehensible act or remark of an individual American, the London Globe discourses at length and in characteristic style about the explanation recently given by Gov. Russell, of North Carolina, as to why he accepted passes from railroads. The Globe treats the Governor's words as though they were a recognized and official expression of American opinion. 'When ever difficulties arise between the United States and England,' it says, 'the press of New York and Chicago discusses the points at issue from a platform of international morality so elevated as to make us almost ashamed of not being numbered among the inhabitants of so high-minded a country. It is a relief, therefore, to find that this morality is only a veneer, or rather a disguise, which is assumed for international purposes. The real America may be seen from its domestic dealings.' Then Gov. Russell's silly words are quoted, and the Globe maunders on as follows: 'We ask our readers to endeavor to conceive a case in which an Englishman, occupying any position analogous to that of the Governor of an American State, would accept favors which could only be offered by a breach of the law, and then defend his action by saying that it is the 'custom' for every man to take 'whatever is offered.'' The question, absurd as it is may well be pondered by the North Carolina statesman."

The Picayune does not seem to have a much higher opinion of the Globe writer's mental calibre than it has of our esteemed Governor's, whose defence is pronounced "silly;" but the fact that a paper away down in New Orleans should take a hand in this thing and rebuke the idiocy of the London scribe shows how Gov. Russell's fame has spread and keeps green. It may be incidentally remarked that while they are discussing him he doesn't care a cuss, remains serene, retains his pocketful of pasteboard "courtesies" and utilizes them at his pleasure and convenience.

In his talk before the House Committee on Banking and Currency, Thursday, explaining his bill for the reform of the currency system, he gave his reasons for presenting it and why he thought it should be adopted, the first of which was "To commit the country more thoroughly to the gold standard; remove as far as possible doubts and fears on that point, and thus strengthen the credit of the United States both at home and abroad." This at least has the merest of candor, and should prove fatal to the passage of any bill corner stoned on it. Haven't they claimed all along that this country is on a gold standard? Do not some of them insist that it has never been on any other standard? Were we not told when Mr. McKinley was elected that it meant the death of free silver and of bimetallism, and that it was an emphatic endorsement by the people of the gold standard? But Secretary Gage and those for whom he speaks want the country more "more thoroughly committed" to it, so as to "remove as far as possible all doubts and fears" on that point, that is to say he wants such action taken as will bind the American people for all time, and make it compulsory on them to stand by the gold standard, no matter how circumstances may present themselves. It is practically a scheme to shackle the American people, to deprive them of any power they may possess to modify their monetary system if they find it necessary. Are they afraid of the American people that they should thus undertake to rob them of the right to establish such monetary system as their judgment may approve? Does the ghost of free silver, which they have so often pronounced dead, still frighten them? The sum and substance of this is that the American people must bow to the money power and accept what it offers, and thus the line is drawn between gold monometallism pure and simple and bimetallism. The friends of the latter will feel under obligations to the Secretary for his candor, for it draws the line so that there can be no doubt as to the issue.

* *

Senator Wolcott, of Colorado, has the reputation of being a pretty bright man, but he is playing the part of a simpleton if he imagines he can continue to play that "international agreement" fake on the American people as he did in his remarks in the Senate Thursday, when he said that "negotiations were still pending," but assured the Senate that "the Commission had no intention of prolonging its efforts beyond the point of reasonable hope of success should exist." It is perhaps complimentary to the astuteness of the commission that it will not "prolong its efforts" after all reasonable hope of success disappears. Maybe they left our friend Adlai E. Stevenson (who seems to be lost) over there working up this thing, but our Democratic statesman is not perspiring much on these efforts, for he doubtless understands the situation, from what he has learned and caught on to the obstacles in the way. The committee practically gave it up, and so confessed, when it discovered how it had been buncoed by the British statesmen, and dissolved, two of them coming home, the third remaining abroad, studying European countries and doubtless having a good time; but we insist that after being thus buncoed the Colorado statesman should not, at this late day, in the presence of that dismal failure, undertake to bunco the American people any more. We have had enough if not entirely too much of that.

An Indian missionary informs us that when the Indian wants to swear he has to learn to speak English, as there are no cuss words in the Indian languages. Not only the Indian, but many other languages are remarkably deficient in this respect. The Japanese and Chinese have to borrow from the English vocabulary when they feel an inclination to swear, and even the Frenchman makes a very poor out at cussing a blue streak with his limited assortment of profanity. The ancients were nowhere. It was the builders of the English language who developed the genius to devise a language that the maddest kind of a man could talk in and make himself fully comprehended.

MR. C. C. SHULTS, of Winterset, Iowa, inventor and manufacturer of Shults' Safety Whiffletree Coupling, writes of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. "Two years ago an attack of LaGrippe left me with a weak heart. I had run down in flesh to mere skin and bone. I could not sleep lying down for smothering spells; frequent sharp darting pains and palpitation caused a constant fear of sudden death, nothing could induce me to remain away from home over night. Frances Weston Carruth.

Frances Weston Carruth is the head of an interesting Boston enterprise. She and her sister, well born, fashionably educated girls, who fell in need of money, made it by practicing the art of cookery. From small beginnings their business has grown until it is a large and flourishing one and the list of customers for whom they cater includes most of the Beacon Hill aristocracy. Miss Carruth, in telling of their early struggles, says: "We had no capital to expend in furnishings, so we devised endless makeshifts. Our work-table was constructed out of the side of a large wooden frame which had covered a portrait. It was a huge surface, and when it was laid on two horses, which the carpenter built for a song, behold we had an excellent low table! That and smaller tables were covered with marble cloth and kept spotlessly clean. Then we utilized two large cases of bookshelves that had belonged to our great-grandfather, who, poor soul, would have turned in his grave at the desecration, and they held the boxes, bowls, tins, spices, seasonings and articles which were in constant use."

Keep a Dainty Table.

Order and promptness do more toward making a meal enjoyable than all the savory dishes in the world if served in a slovenly manner and 20 minutes after dinner has been announced. Do not ring the bell until everything is ready for the table, and see to it that every dish is immaculate and made to look as appetizing as possible. Cold meats or salads may always be garnished so as to form an attractive spot on the table. It is wonderful to what a degree an artistic arrangement of the viands will tempt a flagging appetite.

See that bread is cut in dainty slices, neither too large nor too thick, and that it is laid in a dainty pile on the plate.

See that the butter is fresh and clean cut. Keep the left over bits for cooking.

See that the salt cellars are evenly filled and that the openings of the pepper box are not all stopped up.

Have the dessert all served on the sideboard and keep the coffee hot in the urn. A careful housewife will not allow her table to become mussy during the meal. She avoids this by quickly removing soup plates and dishes after each course.

Stocking Sachets.

Dress stockings are such dainty accessories of the wardrobe of the woman of today that they have reached the dignity of a sachet. Stocking sachets are quilted, perfumed, lace trimmed affairs, tied shut with bows not dissimilar to those in which long gloves are kept.

For Veils.

A button and loop are the latest additions to milliners' veils, and the most convenient, according to a New York journal. The ends are gathered into the right size for the contour of the hat and finished so that pins are no longer a necessity.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE.

— Monroe Enquirer: On Wednesday morning, December 15th, 1897, Mrs. Susan A. Covington, of this place, died at her home after a few days' sickness of a complication of diseases and of old age.

— Dunn Union: We are informed that quite a large acreage of wheat has been sown this fall through this section. Probably more than ever before. Our farmers are determined to make breadstuff and less cotton.

— Weldon News: After a brief illness of pneumonia, Mrs. H. D. Terrell died at the home of her husband here Wednesday afternoon of last week. —— We regret to learn of the failure of B. R. Browning & Son, one of the oldest established mercantile firms in Littleton. The firm did a large time business, and assets are largely in excess of liabilities, but a failure to collect and the low prices of cotton force the firm to the wall.

— Raleigh Post: The 5 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. David Moore died a horrible death at Guilford College Thursday morning. Three weeks ago the little fellow was bitten on the hand by a rat. No attention was paid to the apparently slight wound until a few days ago, when the boy became sick and was thrown into convulsions. He continued to grow worse until this morning, when death ended his sufferings. —— Four more cows of the herd of cattle at the Agricultural and Mechanical College have been killed, it being developed that they were affected with tuberculosis. This makes twelve of the herd killed to date, and it is believed that the disease has been stamped out.

— Wilson Advance: On Thursday morning last at his residence on Nash street Mr. E. L. Applewhite passed away. Mr. Applewhite was born in Columbus county, where he passed the early years of his life on his father's farm. —— A man by the name of Hogwood died at his home near Lucama Tuesday night. Reports are conflicting as to the cause of death. Some think that he went out to feed his mule and was kicked, others seem to think that there was foul play. It seems that the accident, or injury, was done last week. Hogwood went out early in the morning to feed his horse and when he failed to return for breakfast his family went out to ascertain the cause of the delay. They found him resting against the lot fence. Later investigation showed that his skull was fractured. He never recovered sufficiently to give an explanation.

—Wadesboro Messenger-Intelligencer: Mrs. A. L. Caudle died at her home in Polkton, Sunday morning, after a long illness, aged about 31 years. The deceased was the eldest daughter of Dr. D M. Smith. —— The many friends here of Mr. Callie M. Little were greatly shocked Sunday to hear of his death, which occurred Friday night at Selma, Ala., where he was buying cotton for Heath Bros., of Charlotte. Friday night Mr. Little retired a little after 12 o'clock, apparently in his usual health, and was found dead in bed Saturday morning at 1 o'clock. It is thought his death was the result of heart failure. Mr. Little was about 37 years old and was the son of Mr. Jno. P. Little, of Upper Richmond. ——The residence of Capt Frank Bennett, at Paris, on the Cheraw & Darlington railroad, was entirely destroyed by fire about 1 o'clock yesterday morning. Besides the dwelling nearly all the furniture and all the outhouses in the yard, consisting of smoke house, wood house and well house were burned. The fire is supposed to have been caused by rats and matches. The burned building was one of the largest and handsomest country residences in the county. Capt. Bennett estimates his loss at $4,000; insurance on dwelling and furniture, $2,500.

Apropos of the Dining Hall.

In an artistic dining room of a suburban house on the Hudson there hangs over the fireplace a wide, shallow board, tinted in a delicate shade of brown, on which in graceful letters of a darker brown is inscribed this sentiment:

Old wine to drink.
Old wood to burn,
Old friends to greet.

On the opposite wall, over the sideboard, hangs another one fashioned after the sign of an old English inn, with the nails and weather beaten edges faithfully copied, and on this is written Burns' impromptu grace, said in response to his host's request at dinner when visiting the Earl of Selkirk at St. Mary's isle:

Some hae meat and canna eat,
And some wad eat that want it,
But we hae meat, and we can eat,
And may the Lord be thankit.

Tight Shoes.

Don't wear tight shoes if you want your feet to look and feel well. Don't wear a short shoe. It does not make a foot look agreeably small. It gives great pain and in time produces bunions. An ill fitting shoe, whether too small or too large, it does not matter, produces corns and all their attendant discomforts. Temporary relief for a painful corn may be found by applying a mixture of carbolic acid and sweet oil, or binding on the corn at night a small piece of lemon. By rubbing the feet with glycerin after bathing blisters may be prevented if they are tender and a general soothing effect produced. A well shaped foot looks well in any style of shoe; a defective foot, whether deformed by nature or careless treatment, should always be covered by a black shoe, which hides many shortcomings and outgrowings and is always in good taste.

Woman's Wardrobe.

They say the state of the wardrobe is an index to character. Certainly untidy women throw their garments about on taking them off, hang bodices, skirts, mantles of different seasons one over the other, because space is limited, leave the wardrobe door open and then wonder why their clothes get dusty, out of shape and look much more untidy and shabby than those of their friends. Every garment, when taken off, should be shaken before it is hung up.

Mrs. Ruth McEnerny Stewart.

Mrs. Ruth McEnery Stewart works in the spasmodic way that traditionally belongs to genius and which to a delicately organized woman like herself is often wearing. Eight hours a day at her desk for days together when the fire of composition is upon her is a draft upon her physical resources that nature sometimes insists upon having honored, to the great anxiety of the friends of this gifted woman. Mrs. Stewart is tall and slender, with dark eyes and hair, most graceful in movement, and with a musical southern voice and accent that are hers by birth and education. She doesn't ride a bicycle and she loves mushrooms inordinately are further personalities that would not be permissible except that the public dearly loves to read the smallest details about its favorite authors.—New York Times.

COTTON MARKETS.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, December 17.—The public cables at hand when the cotton market opened this morning were sized up as indifferent, although private cables forecasted an increased inquiry for spot cotton at Liverpool from Lancashire. This gave our market a steady start, with prices one point better to one point worse on the first call, as compared with yesterday's closing figures. For the rest of the session the market was without pronounced feature, while showing a weak undertone most of the time, following discouraging Fall River and New England accounts generally and without speculative or investment support to speak of. There was, however a little investment buying here by parties who are quietly picking up lines of cotton as they come on the market from discouraged holders. The entire swing of today's market was only a matter of 1 to 2 points, with the tone finally quiet and steady at net unchanged prices to one point lower.

The following are the total net receipt of cotton at all ports since September 1st, 1897: Galveston, 1,257 088 bales; New Orleans, 1,278 283 Mobile, 191 066; Savannah, 788 840 Charleston, 319 891; Wilmington, 250 283; Norfolk, 374 728; Baltimore, 25 040; New York, 50 673; Boston, 81 871; Newport News, 5 866; Philadelphia, 34 697; Port Royal, 40 463; Brunswick; 101 506; Pensacola, 49 878 Total, 4,841,287 bales.

TATTOOED.

[CONCLUDED.]

Nell's face paled. She did not wish him to stay. Marriage would be a great deal worse than tattooing.

"Oh," she cried, "if he can't trust me, it doesn't matter." And she bared her right arm.

"That's sensible," said Captain Davidson, taking up the bunch of needles.

He performed the operation with great tenderness, and the girl bore the pain almost without wincing. But it was not the word "Bertie" that he traced out. When finished, the inscription read, "I love B. P." The ancient mariner had intended to tattoo the sentence in full, "I love Bertie Page," but finding that he had scarcely left room he curtailed it.

"There," he said, when alone with his nephew, "she's safe to stick to you. With that motter on her arm she can't marry anybody else. She's aground, high and dry, and I'd like to see the tide that'll lift her off."

At the time appointed the Falcon steamship set out on its voyage with Mr. Bertie Page on board.

* * * * * * *

Among the most attentive of Dick Goodeve's friends was a certain Jack Pemberton, a fine, handsome, manly fellow. He was one of the youths with whom Nelly had compared her lover, but the ring on the third finger of the girl's left hand forbade him to speak.

One day when he called the golden circlet was not to be seen. Some weeks previously it had dawned upon Nelly that the legend on her arm would compel her to wed the sailor or remain a spinster. Angry at the trick of which she had been a victim, she took off the ring and had never worn it since.

As the ring continued invisible, Pemberton presently grew bolder, and one evening he spoke out.

"I want you to tell me," he said, "whether you still intend to marry Mr. Page. I've no right to ask the question, I know, but my future depends on your answer."

"I couldn't—I can't marry anybody," she sobbed.

Jack Pemberton was not the man to stand by and see a girl weep without endeavoring to console her. It might not have been necessary to put his arm round her waist, but that is what he did.

"You don't love him," he whispered. "You never loved him. That is why you can't marry him. Do you think you could love me?"

"I can't—I mustn't! Don't ask me! It's cruel! I am tied—tied for life!"

"You don't mean to say that it's too late?" he cried. "Surely you haven't married him on the quiet?"

The girl shivered.

"No, no; not that. It's—oh, I can't explain! It was Captain Davidson's fault."

"But how could he tie you?" Pemberton persisted, determined to solve the mystery.

"He tattooed 'I love Bertie Page' on my arm, and now I can't marry anybody."

"Captain Davidson ought to be—punished!" he exclaimed. "Will you let me see the tattooing?"

Blushing more than ever, the girl bared her shapely arm.

"Why, it isn't 'Bertie Page!'" he cried. "It is 'I love B. P.'"

"Y-es, but it means Bertie Page."

"Not necessarily," Pemberton rejoined, laughing. "It will fit me very well. I'm called Jack, but I was christened Benjamin. Suppose we read it, 'I love Benjamin Pemberton!' What do you say?"

Some men are so masterful. Without waiting for the answer, Pemberton drew the girl's head close and kissed her on the lips. She wore a ring on her finger next day, but it was not that given to her by the sailor.

Chancing to meet Captain Davidson, she took care that he should see it.

"Hello!" he cried. "A new ring! Bertie didn't tell me, the sly young dog."

"This isn't Bertie's," said Nell gravely. "It was given me by Mr. Benjamin Pemberton, whose initials, of course, are B. P. I have written to Bertie, care of the Falcon's owners, saying how sorry I am that I can't marry him."

"The dickens!" cried the old salt. "Two B. P.'s! I guessed you wanted to slip your cable, but I thought I'd fixed it so that it would stand any strain."

Some three months after Nell became Mrs. B. P. the old sea dog received a letter from his nephew. The Falcon had called at Barcelona as usual, with the result that Inez Garcia had become Inez Page.

"Humph!" he muttered as he read the news. "I wonder what lies he told to account for the name on his arm."—Pearson's Weekly.

Effect of Jewels.

Edmund Russell says that the ruby, if fine, far exceeds the diamond in value. Its tones more relate to the tones of the flesh, which is the test in all personal color combinations. The trade value and the beauty value of jewels do not always agree. The finest sapphires become mere black spots at night. Rubies should be worn en masse to be effective. Strong featured women may affect them, but it is better to have a bushel of garnets than one ruby. Very delicate women who are dark should wear moonstones, with a few small diamonds; if blond, straw colored topaz. Hammered gold is becoming to energetic women. Serious, iron gray women should wear ornaments of blackened silver.

Dark Blue.

Of all colors in the world dark blue is the most attractive, and it has the special advantage of adapting itself to all seasons. It always looks light enough for summer wear, and it is dark enough for winter wear, while its hospitality to diverse bodies and skirts is prodigious. It welcomes all sorts and conditions, and welcomes them cordially, suffering none of them to disagree with it.—Exchange.

Shiny Black Silk.

Black silk or satin which has become shiny may be cleaned in the following way: Take clean potato peelings, cover them with water and allow them to soak 24 hours. Then steam them and sponge well the material with the water.

Lay the material between clean cloths and iron on the wrong side until it is quite dry.

The Breadbox.

During the hot weather the breadbox requires special attention to prevent bread from molding. The box should be scalded twice a week and aired in the sun for an hour before fresh bread is put in it. A tin box is much better to use for holding bread than a stone crock.

IRISHMEN IN PARIS.

Some of the Peculiarities of the Colony Resident There.

The Parisians have waked up to the fact that the Irishmen living permanently or temporarily among them are an element that may become of public interest and an object even of international attention at almost any time. They also find that it is difficult or impossible to arrive at any definite idea of the number of personalities of the resident Irishmen, notwithstanding the police surveillance that is kept in Paris, in common with most other continental cities, over foreigners who take up their abode there. This is owing to the fact that Irishmen are entered at the prefecture of police as "Englishmen," a manifestation of official routine that was doubtless not adapted to please the sensibilities of the subjects of it. The result is that while Parisians may know that there are five Dahomeyans and one Nubian among them, they are, officially at least, quite ignorant of the existence of any Irish colony in the city and can have no sure idea unofficially of its members.

It is believed, however, that there are not more than 1,000. Under the empire Irishmen were much more numerous in Paris. That was for them the heroic age, and that age has passed. Times have changed since France was anxious and eager to extend her hand to oppressed peoples. The Irish have turned to America for sympathy, though they keep their lively regard for the French people.

One of the most important representatives of Ireland in the French capital is a seminary situated not far from the Pantheon, founded by Louis XIV. Thither the Irish bishops always betake themselves whenever they go to Paris, and there during their visits they ordain candidates for the priesthood. Bishops and clergy are all devoted friends of France, like Canon Curtin, for instance, who is attached to the parish of the Madeleine.

On the newspapers printed in Paris in English most of the compositors are Irishmen. They are excellent workmen and not engrossed with the idea of throwing bombs in order to obtain their country's independence. They are, nevertheless, Nationalists, and some of them are most ardent among Home Rulers. One of them in particular, Patrick Casey, never lets an opportunity go by of being disagreeable to England. Some years ago the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh, passing through Paris, wished to go to Russia to have an interview with the czar. For this he required a passport, which he could not get at the British embassy, because he was at that time in revolt against the British government. Casey came to his aid by securing a passport for himself and handing it over with great joy to the maharajah for his use.

Once a year, on St. Patrick's day, the Irish in Paris come together to celebrate the memory of their patron saint. There is a large banquet in the Avenue de Clichy, followed by a ball, and another banquet nearer the center of the city, attended by the most prominent members of the Irish colony. But these occasions are gradually losing their former character. There is neither the ardor nor the enthusiasm of former days displayed at them. The Irishmen in Paris, without losing their memories of their native land, are adopting French habits and French ways of thinking, sharing the griefs and joys of the French people.—New York Tribune.

THE BUSINESS SITUATION.

Wholesale Dealers Report Trade Quiet—The Holiday Season Gives Activity in Retail Lines.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, December 17.—Bradstreets' to-morrow will say:

A sensible quieting of demand in wholesale lines is reported as the holiday season and the annual stock-taking period approach. Chief among the favorable features of the week has been enlarged inquiry and higher prices for steel in various forms, accompanied by advances in the prices of sorts most affected. A correspondingly heavy business has developed in pig iron and prices show but a slight shading in face of the current immense production. The wheat market has been less feverish and prices are practically unchanged from a week ago, while corn, oats and sugar are additions to the list of products showing advances. The unsatisfactory outlook for cotton goods is reflected in reductions in bleached goods to the lowest point ever reached, while some cotton yarns show weakness. Anthracite coal is weak, although production has been curtailed and talk of further restriction is heard. With these exceptions, the price situation is one of quite exceptional steadiness.

At the East trade in wholesale lines is quiet, but retail trade has been stimulated sufficiently to allow of a fair recorded business in seasonable lines. Manufacturers of woollen clothes are running on small margins and look to a change in heavy weight goods to improve the situation. The trade situation West and Northwest is one of unimpaired strength, although milder weather checks distribution of winter wear goods.

The approach of the holiday season has induced freer realizing on cotton by planters and others at the South, and increased activity is now probable in retail lines and among jobbers in seasonable goods. Collections are slightly better in consequence, although the lower price of the staple is a discouraging feature. Aside from price depression in its chief product, the Southern business presents many encouraging features, notable among these being the active demand and firm or high prices of Louisiana sugar, rice and leaf tobacco. Export trade on the Pacific is very heavy, and shipments of wheat, cotton and lumber are of large volume. Preparations for an immense Alaskan outfitting demand are being actively pushed, while seasonable trade holds its own.

Wheat exports show a heavy falling off from recently preceding weeks aggregating as they do (flour as wheat) 4 604 899 bushels from both coasts of the United States and St John, N B, against 6 236 159 bushels last week, 4,223 714 bushels in this week a year ago, 2 458 333 bushels in 1895, 2 536,293 bushels in 1894 and 3,217,050 bushels in 1893.

Corn exports are over 1 000,000 bushels larger than last week, aggregating 4 129 878 bushels, against 2,814 150 bushels in this week a year ago, 2 057,790 bushels in '95 658,000 bushels in '94 and 559 000 bushels in '93.

Business failures show a rather smaller than usual ante-holiday total, aggregating 283, against 293 last week, 359 in the week a year ago, 385 in 1895, 309 in '94, and 353 in '93.

COTTON MOVEMENT.

The Visible Supply—Receipts and Stocks—Foreign Exports and Mill Takings.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW ORLEANS, December 17.—Secretary Hester's weekly statement places the world's visible supply of cotton at 4 071 063 bales, against 3 856 208 last week and 4 066,576 last year. Of the former amount, 3,841,063 bales are American.

The statement shows an increase in the movement in sight, compared with the seven days ending this date last year, in round figures 99 000 bales. For the seventeen days of December the total shows an increase over last year of 238 000 bales. The movement since September 1 shows receipts at all United States ports of 4 816 613 bales against 4 589 154 last year. Overland across the Mississippi, Ohio and Potomac to Northern mills and Canada, 575 175 against 493 008 last year. Interior stocks in excess of those held at the close of the commercial year, 565,314 against 428 893 last year. Southern mill takings, exclusive of amount consumed at Southern outports, 402,039 against 386,539 bales last year.

Foreign exports for the week have been 3 2,388 against 240 050 last year. Northern mill takings during the past season show an increase of 4,195 as compared with the corresponding period last year. Stocks at the seaboard and at twenty-nine leading Southern interior centres have increased during the week 49 887 bales and are now 137,846 less than at this date last year. Including stocks left over at ports and interior towns from the last crop and the number of bales brought into sight thus far, new crop, the supply up to date is 5,-685 557 against 6,016,168 for same time last year.

THE TAX UPON ALCOHOL

GIVES RISE TO A SPIRITED DEBATE IN THE SENATE.

Senator Hoar Favors an Additional Tax on Beer—The Klondyke Relief Measure—Pension Bills Passed—House Completed Consideration of Legislative Appropriation Bill.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—A spirited debate was precipitated in the Senate to-day by the submission by Mr. Platt, of Connecticut, of the report of the special joint committee of the Senate and House appointed to investigate the use of alcohol in the arts. It developed that a wide divergence of opinion exists among Senators as to the practicability, from the point of view of Government revenue, of reducing the present tax upon alcohol used in the arts. Mr. Hoar, of Massachusetts, who favors such a reduction, expressed the opinion that if Congress would lay aside political considerations and deal with the liquor question, courageously and honestly, by the imposition of an additional tax of a dollar a barrel on beer, the question of the Government's revenues would take care of itself. Mr. Vest, of Missouri, strenuously opposed any additional tax on beer.

At the suggestion of Senator Hawley, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, the bill passed by the House for the relief of the miners in the Klondyke region was taken up at once. He moved that all after the enacting clause of the House bill be stricken out and the Senate bill substituted. The motion was carried, and the bill as amended passed. Senators Hawley, Carter and Cockrell were named as conferees on the part of the Senate.

Senator Stewart, of Nevada, rose to a question of personal privilege to reply to a charge which, he said, had been made against him by Senator Chandler, a charge which he characterized as a very grave one. He referred to the assertion of the New Hampshire Senator that he (Stewart) had misrepresented the attitude of the administration on the financial question. He had extracts read from the statement made yesterday by Secretary Gage before the House Committee on Banking and Currency to show that the administration was committed to the gold standard. He contended that this statement fully confirmed all that he had said, and further that it manifested a determination to place the control of the currency in the hands of the banks, giving them all the advantages and exacting from them no security.

The consideration of pension cases was then begun, and 188 bills were passed. One of the bills granted a pension of $50 a month to Cassius M. Clay, Sr., of Kentucky, a major general of the U. S. A. during the war between the States.

Senator Turpie, of Indiana, then presented the regular order of business, the consideration of resolutions on the death of William Steele Holman, late representative from Indiana.

Resolutions of condolence were passed and as a further mark of respect the Senate at 4 35 adjourned until to-morrow.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The House to-day completed the consideration of the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation bill, excepting the paragraph relating to the civil service. By agreement the debate on this latter paragraph will go over until after the holidays. Two amendments of some importance were adopted. The bill as reported abolished the assay office at Deadwood, S. D., and the mints at Carson City, Nev., and New Orleans, La. To-day the representatives from the two former States made a vigorous and successful fight to continue the appropriations for Deadwood and Carson City. The Appropriation Committee was beaten in each instance.

Mr. Brownlow of Tennessee, Republican, asked unanimous consent for the consideration of a resolution reciting the fact that the report of the Secretary of the Navy on the location of the armor plate factory made no mention of the board's visit to the South, and calling upon him to cause the data procured by the board as to the advantage of the South to be prepared and forwarded to the House. Mr. Steele of Indiana, Republican, wanted to offer an amendment to cover Indiana and Illinois, but Mr. Dingley of Maine, Republican, objected, and the resolution and amendment were referred under rules.

On Mr. Cannon's motion the House disagreed to the Senate amendment to the bill for the relief of miners of the Upper Yukon and agreed to a conference. Messrs. Cannon, of Illinois; Northway, of Ohio, and Sayers, of Texas, were appointed conferees.

The Speaker announced the appointment of Messrs. Hitt of Illinois, Republican, Adams of Pennsylvania, Republican, and Wheeler of Alabama, Democrat, regents of the Smithsonian Institute.

On motion of Mr. Mercer of Nebraska, a bill was passed to increase the cost of the government building at the trans-Mississippi Exposition $12,500, and the cost of the government exhibit a like amount.

At 4 50 p. m. the House adjourned.

FREIGHT COMMISSIONERS.

The National Association Organized and Officers Elected for the Ensuing Year.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, December 17.—The first regular session of the National Association of Freight Commissioners was held here to-day for the general purpose of affecting a permanent organization. The members of the association represent commercial bodies in their respective cities and are charged with the duty of securing equal justice for shippers in their dealings with the transportation companies. It is not, it is said, essentially antagonistic to the transportation lines, but acts in the capacity of mediator between such lines and shippers. Another purpose of the organization is said to be the proper presentation of the shippers' side of questions which may be at any time under consideration by Congress.

Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows: President, N. R. Kelley, Philadelphia; Vice President, John A. Smith, Charleston, S. C.; Secretary, W. E. Trickett, Kansas City; Treasurer, W. F. Maxwell, St. Joseph, Mo.; Executive Committee, A. J. Valandingham, St. Louis; F. B Thurber, New York; L. R. Boswell, Quincey, Ill.; J. S. Wavant, Memphis, Tenn., and J. B. Denison, Galveston, Tex.

Annual meetings will be held in Washington the day preceding the opening session of the National Board of Trade.

Resolutions were adopted urging that additional power be conferred on the Inter-State Commerce Commission to meet weakening of its powers, occasioned by judicial decisions, requesting all railroads to adopt uniform freight classifications prior to January 1st, 1899, and endorsing the pending anti-scalping bill.

Eastern delegates submitted a resolution favoring and Western delegates a resolution opposing pooling bills. An agreement being found impossible, the association adopted a resolution referring the resolutions back to the members of the association.

KID M'COY THE WINNER

CONTEST FOR MIDDLE-WEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE WORLD.

Dan Creedor, the Australian, Threw Up the Sponge at the End of the Fifteenth Round—Heavy Odds Wagered on the Kid.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, November 17.—Norman Selby, of Rush county, Indiana, better known in pugilistic circles as "Kid McCoy," is undoubtedly the champion middle-weight pugilist of the world. He met Dan Creedon, of New Zealand, tonight in the arena of the Puritan Athletic Club at Long Island City, and after fighting fifteen lively rounds, made the foreigner throw up the sponge and acknowledge the "hoosier's" superiority. Long before the big event took place the frame building in which it was held was crowded to excess and bets were freely made, with McCoy the favorite at 10 to 8. The "Kid's" wonderful science and self-possession were always in evidence, and these, combined with the advantage of height and reach, enabled him to outpoint his more stockily built antagonist. From the moment the men put up their hands in the opening round, McCoy's stock began to ascend. It was "boosted" so rapidly that at the end of the sixth round McCoy's backers were offering 8 to 1 on their man. "McCoy is a wonder" was the universal comment when the fight was over, and no one, even those who bet against him, begrudged him his well won laurels.

It was 10.10 when McCoy and Creedon commenced fighting. The announcer said the men would fight twenty-five rounds and if at the end of the twenty-fifth round the referee, Sam Austin, could not pick a winner the men would continue fighting until the referee could give a decision. He also said that the contest was to decide the middle-weight championship of the world.

During the first eight rounds Creedon made a fairly good showing. In the ninth round McCoy drew first blood, opening Creedon's right eyebrow. In the eleventh round Creedon was sent to the floor, but it was more of a slip than a knock-down.

Round 15—Creedon's eye was fixed up with a plaster and he looked anything but handsome when he came to his corner. McCoy provokingly kept jabbing his left on the stomach, occasionally varying his tactics with jabs on the face; advantage of reach was too great a handicap for Dan. McCoy in a rush upper-cut with his left on the face and hooked his right on the jaw, and floored Creedon in his own corner. Dan took the full limit to get up and then clinched. Creedon was very weak when he went to his corner and was unable to respond when the gong rang for the beginning of the sixteenth round. Chovnski, seeing that his man was beaten, threw up the sponge, and as he did so the spectators broke into cheers and tried to jump into the ring and bug McCoy.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

Hotel and Other Buildings Burned—Losses Nearly a Million Dollars.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., December 17.—A special from Grand Forks, N. D., says:

Fire broke out at 4.30 this morning at Nash Bros.' wholesale grocery store, and in a half hour went into the Hotel Dakota, where nearly two hundred guests were housed. The "Lady in Black" Company escaped, as did the people in the hotel, by the fire-escape—a ladder one foot wide running from the sixth story to the first floor. The fire department rescued a large number and but for timely assistance many persons would have been burned.

By 6 30 the Hotel Dakotah, Nash Brothers' wholesale grocery and the Grand Forks mercantile wholesale grocery house were burned, and all the buildings on both sides of Third street for two blocks had suffered loss. The loss will aggregate $470 000 on stocks, furniture, etc., and $300 000 on buildings totally destroyed, while other losses will probably reach $100,000 more. The insurance falls far short of this amount.

NEWS FROM RALEIGH.

The Battle Flag of the Fourth North Carolina—Mayor Russ—Labor Commissioner's Report—Penitentiary Board May Not Confirm the Appointment of Mewborne by the Governor.

[Special Star Correspondence.

RALEIGH, N. C., December 17.

The movement to have Mrs. P. F. Chase, of New Hampshire, come to the State and formally present the flag of the Fourth North Carolina Regiment, now in her possession, is taking shape. The Adjutant General is agreeable to the plan to have the presentation in Charlotte the 20th of May.

Mayor Russ announced in his court this morning that he would not tolerate any more cigarette smoking crowds at the entrances of Metropolitan Hall.

A turnkey at the city police station took a bottle of whiskey from a drunken man and sold it to an outsider after 11 o'clock at night. The turnkey was honest in his intentions, as he turned the 50 cents, the amount he received for the whiskey, over to the Chief of Police. Mayor Russ demanded the resignation of the officer, which he promptly tendered.

The report of the Labor Commissioner will be a handsome affair. Mr. Hamrick has secured a large number of cuts with which to illustrate the report. The tobacco industry will be a feature. Among the contributors will be Col. J. S. Carr, Col. Jno. L. Cunningham and R. J. Reynolds.

The Penitentiary Board does not meet here until January. There has been some talk to the effect that the Board would not confirm the appointment of Mr. Mewborne by the Governor. Director R R Cotton, who was here yesterday, says he knows nothing of this.

The Board of Agriculture is drawing out the present session very well. All the business before the Board could have been transacted in half a day.

An inmate of the county home died yesterday at the advanced age of 105 years.

I learn that a member of the Agricultural Board will resign because of the transfer of John R. Smith to the department. This director says the swap was a disgrace to the State.

TWO MURDERERS HANGED.

A Remarkable Execution at Belton, Georgia.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

ATLANTA, GA., December 17.—Bud Brooks and Grady Reynolds, who together murdered merchant M. C. Hunt, of Belton, Ga., were taken from the county jail at Jefferson to day and privately hanged on a hill a few yards distant. Both made statements from the gallows. Both men died on the same gallows.

The execution was remarkable in many respects. After the ride to the gallows, a distance of half a mile, the murderers were robed in white and permitted to speak to a throng of 1,000 people who packed around the gallows enclosure. On the scaffold the two men held a brief conversation, each inquiring after the other's spiritual condition. Among the twenty men who saw the execution were the three brothers of the murdered man.

STORE NOTES.

Is your thought on Lace Curtains? We can remedy it for you here. Carpet stock never was better. It's a busy spot at this writing. Got the parasol stock in shape; paused to have you make your selection.

Do you buy Dress Linings here? We're equipped to sell you satisfactory linings at satisfactory prices.

Is her's a notion and ribbon stock to be proud of. They're little things, but little things count in this shop.

JACKETS AND CAPES ALWAYS.

Quantities of them. Some going out; some coming in. We're closer it during this A to Z. Know where, when, why and how to buy; and bear on all, know how to sell to the satisfaction of our customers. No "long-headed" profits here; against our business principles. Fresh lots often; match or enter for you to pick from. Your dollars have great purchasing power in this store, $2.00 to $25.00.

WE'RE PROUD OF OUR KID GLOVE STOCK.

We never lose a customer who once buys Kid Gloves here. We sell more Kid Gloves than all the rest of Wilmington combined. There are of course, reasons for all this. But we will only mention one of them to-day: Our Ladies' Dollar Kid Gloves. Laces and buttons all warranted.

HOSIERY AND UNDERWEAR.

We're busy in this stock nearly all the time; the department gets fresh imports from such firms as these, no wonder how it's done; no here wonder why it's done. The now and the why matters little, the fact of its being done is sufficient for money-saving buyers. The best 25 cents Hose in the city.
